Women's History Month salutes 'extraordinary century for women'

By Pat Cataldo

Americans observe Women's History Month in March, this year marking the 152nd anniversary of the women's movement to achieve full civil rights in the United States. The theme for 2000 is, "An Extraordinary Century for Women — Now Imagine the Future."

Highlighting the local observance is a luncheon March 10 at the Yokwe Yuk Club, with guest speakers Gwyne Copeland and Sgt. Linda Wilson.

The menu features stuffed breast of chicken with fettuccini, salad, bread, vegetable, and dessert, at $6.95, including iced tea and gratuity. Call Ellen Smith, 58909, by March 8 for reservations.

Copeland, a former TV reporter with ABC-affiliate KEZI in Eugene, Ore., and a Kwajalein resident for seven months, will suggest ways that women at Kwaj can use their time to become a positive force for change.

Copeland and her husband, Randall Erikson, have four children, from 8 to 18 years of age. She teaches broadcast journalism at Queen of Peace High School, Gugegue. Her students produce an hour-long news and music show on V92.1 radio, Ebeye, that airs Thursdays at 3:30 p.m. Copeland also fills in as news and feature writer for the Hourglass.

"Women in the Military" is the topic chosen by Wilson, who has nine years' Army service. She has been at USAKA/KMR since June 1998 as personnel sergeant.

Wilson is enthusiastic about opportunities for women in the military, but she has a new goal: She will leave Kwajalein and the Army in June and return to her home in Ridgeway, S.C., where she plans to pursue a

Mike Dolan, left, looks on as Lance Bryan, computer network technologist and information system security officer, teaches a seminar on computer security Thursday at CAC Room 1. The class will be offered through April 15.

Keeping computers secure

USAKA/KMR, IT take training to end users

Everyone has seen them on their computers. The dancing cartoons sent by e-mail or the chain letters that will land you $100 if you send them to 100 of your closest friends.

Though seemingly harmless, they can cost the computer user, the company, and the Army.

That's just one of the lessons learned in computer security training now being presented to more than 1,500 users on-island over the next eight weeks.

"You have to teach users the rules, or you can't expect them to follow them," said Paul Savage, Information Technology manager. "The Army is investing a lot in this, and the result will be dependable and secure networks."

In a partnering effort between USAKA/KMR and RSE, the message is being taken on the road. John Jorgenson, USAKA/KMR automation security specialist and information systems security manager; Rick Huber, IT Systems Support manager and network security officer; and Lance Bryan, computer network technologist and information system security officer, are giving hour-long training sessions every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the CAC. All network account holders are required to take a class.

The training is part of government accreditation of the Kwajalein networks, and it has a very practical purpose. With computer traffic serving as a key communication line for much of the work here at Kwajalein and in the defense business worldwide, keeping computer networks secure is vital. And security is important with respect to more than just classified data.

"The majority of the information is sensitive but unclassified," Huber said. "The Army has learned, though, [that] the unclassified networks allow the Army to function."

Likewise, threats abound.

Viruses, for example, may be sent via e-mail and executing a cute cartoon, known as a "Trojan Horse," could have dire consequences.

"It may be doing one thing on the screen, but something else in the background, like checking your key-degree in law.

Wilson is the single mom of twin daughters; one is at Kwaj, and the other is a private first class at Ft. Hood, Texas, with a year's Army service. Wilson also has one grandchild and is cheerfully anticipating the birth of a second in early May.

"Fund the Cure" stamps

In conjunction with Women's History Month, "Fund the Cure" postage stamps supporting breast cancer research are on sale at the Kwaj and Roi post offices. These first-class stamps sell for 40 cents instead of the usual 33 cents, with the extra 7 cents going to research.

If all the "Fund the Cure" stamps released by the U.S. Postal Service are sold, $16 million will be raised for breast cancer research.

The American Cancer Society estimates that there will be 184,000 new cases of invasive breast cancer among women in the United States in the year 2000.

Women's rights movement

The women's rights movement dates its beginning as July 13, 1848, when Elizabeth Cady Stanton, a young housewife and mother from Seneca Falls, N.Y., met with four women friends for a tea party.

The conversation centered on the limitations on women in America. Women could not vote, for example, and married women had no property rights. Women couldn't become doctors or lawyers — in fact, most occupations were closed to them. Women couldn't even enter a college or university — none would accept women students.

Substituting action for chagrin, the five women agreed to sponsor the world's first women's rights convention. They placed an ad in the Seneca County Courier, announcing "a convention (on July 19-20, 1848) to discuss the social, civil, and religious condition and rights of women."

It was a landmark meeting, with landmark ramifications in the 20th century. Among them were the winning of women's suffrage in 1920; passage of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, prohibiting employment discrimination on the basis of sex, as well as race, religion, and national origin; and passage of Title IX in the 1972 Education Codes ensuring equal access to higher education and professional schools.

Measures being taken to ensure cement dust is properly handled

Comment

I have noticed the workers building the new housing for Boeing working with respirators to handle the silica cement. A lot of this cement is being blown down on the housing area. I am concerned about the health of my children playing outside with this cement residue all over the place. Does the cement residue pose a safety risk?

Response

I have been in contact with personnel at Dick Pacific regarding the cement dust complaint. Cement dust does contain silica dust, which after prolonged exposures (10 years or more of working in heavy concentration areas) is considered a carcinogen. Construction workers are required by OSHA to wear personal protective equipment to guard against these long-term effects.

Acute exposure to silica dust could result in minor eye and skin irritation to some people. Exposure to personnel not directly involved in the dome construction operation is considered negligible. In order to verify these exposure levels, dust sampling will be performed by the RSE Safety and Industrial Hygiene Department. If this sampling indicates that the silica dust levels are higher than anticipated, additional restrictions or recommendations will be instituted.

Initial recommendations to reduce the dust levels have been given to Dick Pacific personnel, and they have agreed to implement several measures to reduce the dust levels:

- Concrete batching operations will be conducted as far as possible from the road and new housing areas.
- Water spray will be used to minimize dust dissipation.
- A job-site dust screen barrier has been erected at the concrete batching location, and a screen will be kept damp to capture fugitive dust.
- RSE Safety and Industrial Hygiene Department personnel will conduct dust sampling to ensure that the concentration of dust reaching the road and housing areas does not approach hazardous levels.

Dick Pacific personnel have been very cooperative and have indicated they will do all they can to solve this problem.

Women around the globe join in World Day of Prayer

By Barbara Johnson

Women from Kwajalein and Ebeye will join with women from more than 170 countries and regions worldwide tonight to participate in the 113th World Day of Prayer, held the first Friday of March each year.

The service, which is at 6:30 p.m. in Island Memorial Chapel, will include prayer, readings, music, and fellowship for Christian women of all faiths. It will be conducted in both English and Marshallese.

Lora Kendrick, this year's chairwoman, said, "We'll probably be the first [to hold the service] in the world. There's something special about ladies from all over the world getting together."

The service will be led by Kendrick, Lynn Lanej, and Meria Sorimle.

World Day of Prayer is a worldwide movement of Christian women from many traditions who observe a common day of prayer each year. It brings women of various races, cultures, and faiths into closer fellowship, understanding, and action.

Through this day, women affirm their faith together and become aware of the whole world — the gifts and burdens of other people.

Each year, the focus of the program is on a different country. This year, women of Indonesia planned the program and chose the theme, "Talitha Kumi, Young Woman Stand Up!" The theme is taken from the Bible, where it reads, "Talitha Kumi, little girl, I tell you to get up."

Many of the problems faced by young people in Indonesia today are those faced around the world. Multi-national corporations have established factories in Indonesia that use child labor and exploit young people. A lack of appropriate and well-paying jobs, as well as a communication gap between older and younger people, are other problems the people of Indonesia face.

Women in rural areas often have to work very hard, with 18-hour work days common. Hundreds of thousands of women have left Indonesia to be employed as domestic workers in the Middle East, Hong Kong, and Malaysia, among other countries, to provide a better standard of living for families they leave behind. Employers sometimes mistreat women, and the women often receive lower pay than men for the same work.

This year's theme represents a call to action and encourages older women to enter into mentoring relationships with younger women.

This evening's service includes a slide show, provided by Church Women United, the organization that sponsors World Day of Prayer. The slides will illustrate Indonesian history, today's issues, and church women's work in Indonesia. The offering from tonight's service will go toward helping women of Indonesia.

Also tonight, the praise team from the Kwajalein Protestant Chapel will sing. A fellowship hour with refreshments will follow the service.

Women from Protestant, Catholic, and Baha'i faiths from Kwajalein will participate in the service, along with women from several churches on Ebeye, including Baha'i Center, Buknon Non Jesus Church, Calvary Church, Queen of Peace, Reformed Congregational Church, Seventh Day Adventist Church, and United Church of Christ.

World Day of Prayer began in the United States in 1887 when, out of concern for the plight of immigrants and the aftermath of slavery, lay women in the Presbyterian Church sent out a call for a national day of prayer.

A few years later, a Baptist women's group began a Day of Prayer for foreign missions. The two days were joined to focus on both global and national concerns. In 1920, a national committee was formed, and the first Friday of Lent was set as the day of prayer.

Missionaries introduced World Day of Prayer to the Marshall Islands through the United Church of Christ. It has gradually spread to other denominations.

Third-grade students raise money to free slaves

Story and photos by Gwyne Copeland

Thanks to the generosity of parents, third-graders, and their customers in fourth through sixth grades, a marketplace Saturday at George Seitz Elementary School earned $677.62 to free 13 women and children from slavery.

According to third-grade teacher Madelain Westermann, the money will be donated to Christian Solidarity International, a Christian-based human rights organization founded in Zurich, Switzerland, in 1977.

When third-grade students at the school found out there were people enslaved in Sudan, they were shocked.

They had just finished studying about slavery and the civil rights movement in the United States.

Together, Westermann and Gwen Kelly's classes decided they had to do something about the slaves in Sudan.

The students voted unanimously to donate all the proceeds from their marketplace to the organization working to free slaves.

Monica Peters, a third-grader, knows exactly how their donation will help.

Andrew Hogan sold shaved ice for his marketplace product. He said he got his inspiration from his brother.

Third-grader Stacey Sargent snaps a photo of classmates Hannah Poirier and Cornelia Notarianni. Third-grade classes raised $677 to free slaves in the Sudan.

"It's an anti-slavery place. They go and buy slaves and help them find their families," Peters said.

Another third-grader, Andrea Morrison, sold cake and copies of an original story to raise money for CSI.

"Each $50 is worth two cattle, and two cattle equals one person," Morrison said.

CSI says in its brochure that the slaves are victims of the fundamentalist Islamic regime in Sudan. The organization goes to Africa and buys slaves from traders for about $50 each. Using an elaborate "underground railroad," the organization resettles the people.

According to the Time Almanac 2000, "Arab raiders from the north of the country have enslaved thousands of southerners, who are black."

This is the second year the third grade has raised money for CSI, but Westermann said this is by far the most money ever raised by a marketplace.

In December, the third-grade marketplace raised $400 for Christmas on Carlos.

Westermann and Kelly use the marketplace to teach children the usefulness of math. During the school year, students develop a business plan, apply for a permit, and set up shop every couple of months. They sell things like homemade treats, picture frames and photos, shaved ice, and Pokémon cards.

Most of the time, students use currency negotiable only in their classrooms. But for this marketplace, they were trading in real money.

The students had a choice: They could sell their products and keep the money for themselves, or they could donate it. Kelly said every one of the children voted to donate the money to free slaves.

Recompression chamber unavailable

In conjunction with the GT-29 mission on Wednesday, the recompression chamber will be unavailable March 4-15. During this period, recreational diving will be limited to 50 feet while the chamber is made available to Marine Department divers.

The normal recreational dive limit is 130 feet.

In conjunction with the mission, a caution area will exist within Kwajalein Atoll.

These areas outside of Kwajalein Atoll have been designated as caution areas in conjunction with Wednesday's mission.

Range operation scheduled for Wednesday

From KMR Safety Office

A range operation is scheduled for 8:01 p.m. Wednesday. Caution times are 7:01 p.m. Wednesday to 4:01 a.m. Thursday.

In conjunction with this operation, a caution area will exist within Kwajalein Atoll, defined by the area bounded on the north by Boked Island on the east reef and Yabbernohr Island on the west reef, and bounded on the south by a line drawn north of Bigej Island on the east reef to a point at latitude 08 54.2N, longitude 167 45.8E, then to a point at latitude 08 52.8N, longitude 167 45.8E, and then to a point north of the high tide mark on Ninni Island on the west reef.

Bigej Island, including the inner reef, is specifically excluded and is not a part of the mid-atoll corridor. Illeginni is designated an evacuation island; all other mid-atoll corridor islands are designated as sheltered islands.

In order to ensure clearance of non-mission support personnel from the mid-atoll corridor by the window opening time, Kwajalein police island clearance procedures will begin at approximately 7:30 a.m. on Sunday and continue until evacuation has been accomplished. Egress of all air and seacraft will be required when requested by authorized clearance personnel. Subsequent to lagoon clearance, the hazard area will be in effect until mission completion.

In the event of a mission slip, the caution times and areas will be in effect for the following days:

- 7:01 p.m. Thursday, March 9, through 4:01 a.m. Friday, March 10.
- 7:01 p.m. Friday, March 10, through 4:01 a.m. Saturday, March 11.

Questions regarding the above safety requirements for this mission should be directed to the Command Safety Office, range safety officer, 54250.

Computer security training given to account holders ...

strokes to access your password," Huber said.

"It's the same at home," he added. "If I can get in and access your Quicken (financial software) file and get your Social Security number, I own you, meaning I can wreck your credit rating and have a very good time doing it."

Kwajalein computer users receive more than 10,000 e-mails a day, and, while the content of those e-mails is private, the data is sifted by virus-detection software. Over a given week, the software does detect some viruses, Huber said, and in all cases the receiver and sender are notified.

There are other problems associated with misuse of computers, as well.

Most computer networks on Kwajalein operate on wide area networks, or WANs. That means an e-mail sent across the street could travel around the world before reaching the addressee. Normally, that's not a problem — it travels all but instantaneously. But a WAN is a smaller pipeline of information than a local area network, or LAN, and if the WAN is clogged with extraneous data, the e-mail may take longer to send.

Even more serious is the potential for computer hacking. Computer hacker violations are prohibited under federal law, with illegal acts punishable by up to a $100,000 fine and a year in jail.

The IT training session deals with these topics, along with policies and procedures, passwords, privacy, and other issues.

Dohrman wins racquetball tournament

Gene Dohrman outdueled and outlasted Steve Tally to win his second consecutive racquetball tournament — and the first of the 2000 season — on Monday at the CRC racquetball courts.

Dohrman, an engineer with USAKA/KMR, went undefeated throughout the tournament, with a spotless 10-0 record. Dohrman also went undefeated in last September's racquetball tournament, en route to his first championship.

Eight players participated in the four-hour event. They were divided between the two courts, with each contestant playing three matches against different players. Each match was a best-two-out-of-three-games contest to 11 points. A pair of consolation matches were held for the four players with the fewest wins, while the top four contestants battled it out in a two-tiered championship round.

Tally remained undefeated until the semi-finals, when Randy Erikson drew first blood by winning the initial game, 11-6. But Tally rallied his resources and went on to win 11-3, 11-3. It was the only match of the tournament to go to three games.

The additional game may have been a factor in the championship match, as Dohrman had plenty of time to rest after dispatching Bill Kemp in the semi-final round by scores of 11-2, 11-2.

Still, the action was brisk and edgy, as Dohrman and Tally battled for momentum, racing up and down the court, and even skidding into the back wall. A few well-placed shots and serves made the difference, as Dohrman edged Tally by a score of 15-11 in the first game, followed by a more dominating 15-7 win.

But Tally's numbers were impressive, especially considering that Dohrman had been stingy throughout the tournament, giving up only 12 points prior to the final match. Tally finished second with an 8-3 record, followed by Erikson, who posted a 5-4 record.

Players and their final records include:

- Gene Dohrman, 10-0
- Steve Tally, 8-3
- Randy Erikson, 5-4
- Bill Kemp, 4-4
- Javier Mora, 4-4
- Peter Rejcek, 4-4
- Mike Denny, 0-8
- Lynn Olson, 0-8

A "farewell" party for the FPQ-19 radar was held Monday evening on Mount Olympus. The radar is scheduled to be bagged this month.

Final hurrah held for FPQ-19 on Monday

By Peter Rejcek

Despite the funerary nature of the event, a festive atmosphere prevailed at Monday's "farewell" party for the FPQ-19 radar.

Dozens of friends and well-wishers gathered at the far end of the island on Mount Olympus for what may be a last viewing of the historic radar. A contract with Specialty Bags Corp. has been negotiated to install a shroud over the radar to protect it from the environment. It was moth-balled in October.

"It was a nice, casual evening," said Tom Krasuski, the last FPQ-19 radar sensor leader and organizer of the going-away party. "We were there to just enjoy it."

About 40 people turned out for the event, according to Krasuski. Tents had been set up to shield revelers from the elements, and a sound system was in place for music.

"There was tons of food," Krasuski added. "Everybody brought food."

FPQ-19 was brought to Kwajalein in 1975 as TPQ-18. In 1982 it was moved from trailers into a permanent building on Mount Olympus. Two years later, it was upgraded and redesignated as FPQ-19. It was the first radar of its kind when it was built in 1961.
